“ Aashrith Jasti

January 28, 2023 at 10:24 AM

“ Please accept our heartfelt condolences for your loss of your dear son, Aashrith. We come to appreciate the deep love that God has when we see his daily support and comfort (Ps.34:18) even during the most difficult and sad times. Those that we love and no longer have them with us will always remain in our hearts as a precious memory.

Lucas Family - February 25, 2017 at 02:50 AM

“ Usha, Chaithu. We are so sorry to hear about Aashrith. He has been a trooper until the very end. We know as parents you have exhausted all the possibilities to cure him. You were the best parents he could have. Even though it was a tiring journey, you have to remember the best of him and go on with your lives. Don't forget you have one more child who is more confused and probably do not understand what's going on. I am sure you give him same parenting you did for Aashrith. Keep all the good memories and go on one day at a time. We love you keep you in our prayers.

“ I am very deeply saddened and troubled imagining why such a beautiful child has been summoned by God so quickly. I am reminded he wishes to endear His best children soon, but what a void, sorrow, and heartache it leaves us all. Rest in peace, Ashrith, with the Almighty.

My deepest condolences to Chaithu and Usha. I cannot even fathom how a parent can power through this trauma. My heart and eyes well up just thinking about it. I wish, hope, and pray that the three find strength in each other; and that Aashrith's memories leave a lasting bond between what we have left.
