“ Dear Malcolm, I am so sorry. Being the survivor can be worse than being the lost one. Cynthia Chisholm did so much and had so much and was so loved and needed. We have long known grief and I will try and send you a strange little extract of page 96+ of "Three Men in a Boat" by Jerome K. Jerome. Nothing helps but it describes mere man when the worst happens--when we lost our first born son at age 23. Your old friend, Daryle

“ Dearest Malcolm and family: I was so saddened to hear of Cyndy's passing and remember many happy gatherings at your home with the research group and for your 60th birthday party. She was the consummate hostess, creative in the kitchen and loved being home and entertaining. She was a great help when I first came to work for the Chisholm group in September 2000 and assisted answering many questions with the two journals in the ensuing year or two.

“ We were very sorry to read in today's Bloomington paper about Cindy's passing. It was a great loss to Indiana University and to Bloomington when the Chisholms moved to Ohio, but that is nothing compared to the loss your family is experiencing now. You have our deepest sympathy.
