“ I just heard of Eric's passing. I am truly in shock. I have not seen or spoken to Eric since high school. He was such a bright light to everyone who knew him. He was smart and funny and very athletic. I looked up to him and his any talents. As his classmate and a mother now, I am deeply saddened to hear Eric is no longer here to spread his happiness with others. I pray for your family that you find some peace in these difficult times. Know that your son/brother was an amazing person and touched so many lives. My prayers are with you.

“ E-Dog Miss you Brother! It was a privilege to be a Friend and co-worker the past 25 years. I have a lifetime of memories: more concerts than I can recall, Motorcycle races, Rides, and a garage full of Goodies that your advice helped pull the trigger when the Heart said yes, but the Head said "No way". You always knew the right words to spur activity. You've kept me out of trouble with the Law except for the occasional speeding incident or had my back even when I was in the wrong. It was great to see the impact that your winning Personality had on so many. Your strength and courage in face of your mortal battle was a true inspiration; your body grew weak but your Spirit still comforts us. Miss our 2am conversations when everyone else was asleep. Your wit and humor would always lighten up any occasion. Cue Lunatic Fringe by Red Rider "~See You on the Other Side"

“ Dear McCloskey family, I am truly sorry for your loss. I would like to share two things I remember about Eric (besides his gifted sense of humor that we all loved.) 1. Eric’s Hard Head: It was 9th grade basketball and we were practicing jump-ball situations. Coach Jones tossed the ball up, Derron Ondo tipped it in one direction and I turned to follow the ball and ran straight into Eric McCloskey’s head. I walked away, blood dripping from my eyebrow and clutching my head. I still have the scar. And I have the image of Eric walking the other way shaking his head. No, not because he was dizzy or hurt, but because he was disappointed that I was hurt. You see, Eric was tough, and he reminded me more than once that I needed to be tougher. 2. Eric’s Leadership: Our senior year of football was a disaster. 0-10. But early in the year, we were competing hard against a good Brookfield team. Although we fought hard to win the game, we came up short. After the final seconds ticked away, I fell to the ground in a heap, upset that we had lost. My reaction was nothing less than childish over-acting . Looking back, it was not one of my best moments. But it wasn’t two seconds after I had crumpled to the ground, feeling sorry for myself, that old number 85 came trotting by me. All he said was “get up, you wussy” and kept on trotting, his head held high. Thanks to Eric, I sprang to my feet and followed him off the field. In a way, I have been following him ever since. I hadn’t spoken to Eric since high school, but to this day, old number 85 chastises me whenever I catch myself being anything less than a man. Thank you for being you, Eric.

“ Lynne: as a dear friend and co-worker I hold you and your family in our heart and prayers. My first thought of Eric was when he was about 8or9 and you and the boys were visiting us, our son Kevin was out back riding his mini-bike and being the sweet shy boy Eric was he came up to me with his little sideway smile and head down said "Jan can I ride the mini-bike?" and with his moms permission he was off and riding. I am sure he is riding above and watching his wife and boys as they grow. Our Prayers are with you and the family. Love Jan

“ I went to high school with Eric and we lived close to each other. As you move away and lose touch with classmates, I have often wondered what happened to him as I would drive past his parent's home on my way home to visit my parents over the holidays etc--- (this year especially as it was our 25th reunion year)--this was not the news I expected to hear and am so saddened for you! He was a sweet guy and funny as others have mentioned. I went to a Sadie Hawkins dance with him as well and probably laughed the whole night. He was generous (offered to drive me to school--but my strict dad wouldn't let me--which I laugh about now that I have my own kids). He always had a smile, and possessed a gift to make you feel comfortable no matter who you were--my prayers are with you....there are no words to dismiss the loss you feel...but the memories and love I'm sure he shared with you in the short time you had with him probably far outweigh most ever receive.

“ OK, well I hate wakes, funerals, viewings, all the above but I had a great time with Eric's family and friends this evening. I saw tons of Honda & ex-Honda folks there like Ricky D, Menel, Joe, Shawn, Billy Bob, hell, I forgot most of their names but they're all really good people and good friends of a great guy. One of Eric's nicknames was E-Rock but it seems his whole family is full of rocks! That didn't sound right...What I meant was that I was so impressed as to how well his wife, kids, parents, brother, everybody was holding up even though it was very clear that they had suffered a great loss. Pictures & video were awesome. DJ "MC RC" was servin' up the heavy vibrations. I honestly didn't want to leave but my wife was about to kick my butt for leaving her with ten 11-year old girls (b-day party). That was a truly healing experience!

“ To the McCloskey Family - The Burke's prayers are with you during this difficult time and I feel extremely fortunate to have become friends with Eric. Eric's love of music resulted many hours of debating which bands and musicians were the best. Always had a laugh after convincing our friends that we needed to go to a certain place which "just happened" to have a band that night. Quick with a joke, loyal as a friend, driven to succeed in anything he took on, and a Man anyone would be blessed to have as a Husband and Father. You are missed and your spirit remains with us.

“ To know Eric is to love him and it is so apparent by the memories we all have of the times /years we have shared. Blessed to know him and friend him is only trumped by being blessed to have him as a child, brother, husband and father. Eric was all about family and friends. My deepest sympathy to his family as we ALL mourn the passing of a Great Man! He will be missed but his spirit and memory lives on in two great kids and the hearts of all who knew him. Rest in knowing that he hurts and toils no more but most of all he is in the arms of GOD! For that he makes us smile once more!!! Because we loved him so much he now rests in peace. I smile again because I had Eric McCloskey as a friend and loved him as a brother!

“ Eric & I have spent hours talking about music (who played guitar for this band on that album kinda stuff). We also often talked about going to a concert together but for a long time, it just didn't work out. Then a couple summers ago, Eric said “The Pretenders are coming....dude, you're not gonna miss this one”. I think RC Cole heard the word “concert” from about 17 cubicles away and was immediately in. As we got closer to game day, Eric wasn't feeling well and said he would meet us at the show in case he couldn't go the distance. So I drove down to the venue with RC which is a whole other story.... When we got to the venue, RC & I met up with Eric and went right up front where the real fans hang out. Next thing we know, the Pretenders come bustin' out and the whole place is moving. Somewhere along the line I got “over served” and I'm still upset with the venue's management. In any case, I was finally hanging out with my music buddy Eric at a show. I'm quite sure that I will never forget the smile on Eric's face when Chrissie Hynde let out that classic line “Deeeetroit leanin”. The very same smile that soooo many people have described on this blog. Eric, my friend, please give me a sign to confirm my suspicion that God has the most kick ass music collection that anyone could imagine! See you soon....

“ Big "E", E-man, E-rock, best man and my best friend. So many names for someone that had a larger than life personality. Eric was such a stabilizing figure in so many people's lives, including mine. Eric, I can only hope that you realized how important our friendship was to me. We had so many good times and experiences. I offer these memories in humor during this difficult time: -Living on Frazee and the art of "home decor". -The red geo and mastering parallel parking with the e-brake. -Mountain biking on the only hill in Bowling Green- the golf course. -1974 Porsche Green: The coolest color ever invented. - Polo's and loafers never go out of style. - Model rocketry gone wrong. And the list goes on. We would often revisit these pastimes and still get a good laugh. I am going to miss you bro, but I will never forget what you meant to me and the special times we shared. As you always ended "catch you on the flipside" and until that day, rest in peace. I love you.

“ Dear Lauralee and family, I recently heard the news of Eric’s passing. Eric was a customer of mine at Honda Automotive. I believe my former employer was his largest supplier and Eric and I spent many long hours working together. I have many, many fond memories of Eric’s humor and strong business sense. Eric was always more than fair in our transactions and I am sure this was his genuine personality in his personal life as well. Eric, as you know, had a certain endearing smile whenever he realized what we didn’t want him to know. Eric was very good at his profession and a very proud Honda Purchasing associate. Although our relationship was mostly professional, Eric shared with me his love for mountain biking and music. I also remember Eric sharing the news of selling his condo and buying a house. He was really excited about this. It was my pleasure to know and work with Eric over the many years. I considered Eric a friend. I pray that you will find comfort in the coming days and months as the Lord always looks out for those who mourn. You and the family are in my daily prayers. Thom Bennett Greenfield, Indiana

“ E...if you are watching from above as I am writing this tribute, you should know, without question, that some of the most memorable moments and biggest laughs of my life were shared with you during our years at BGSU. Springs breaks, motorcycle rides, late nights, roads trips, mountain bike excursions, live concerts, and just hanging out---all times that will never be forgotten. Despite all the craziness, I knew that I found in you a loyal friend that I could always count on. Little did you know the influence you had on my life and the respect that I had for you as a person. I love you and will miss you buddy.

“ Lauralee, Tommy, Michael and the McClosky family, There aren't enough words to fully express our deep sadness and our heavy hearts. We had the pleasure, and honor of knowing Eric and your family these past many many years through (my sister and)brother-in-law and one of Eric's dearest and closest friend, Menel Gregory. We always had such a great time getting together with you. Mike has many fond and funny memories of Eric. When I think of Eric these words come to mind: charismatic, proud, funny, caring, honest, loyal, loving, creative, musician, heavy metal(lol), dependable, determined, dedicated, hard working, a fighter...a hero. Lauralee, you and your two little guys were the sun, the moon and the stars to him. An amazing love you shared. Tommy and Michael, your daddy will be in your hearts forever. Eric was the epitome of how to live life each day...to the absolute fullest. He thought of others before himself. He was one in a gazillion. We share in your grief and sorrow. Eric will be eternally missed and never, ever forgotten. His spirit lives on in each of you. Love, Camille Garbash

“ To the McCloskey family: I'm very sad for your loss of Eric. Many years ago at Honda I worked with him at MMP SD and the past 5 years we were in the same office at NACP. Many associates from those years have been fondly reminiscing the past week about good experiences that had with Eric here and during Japan travel. We all appreciated his fun disposition and accountability to the team. I enjoyed watching Eric grow from someone right out of college to the loving family man he became. I feel confident his young sons are full of their father's spirit and love. You are in my thoughts and prayers. Catherine Doran

“ To the McCloskey family: I am so very for your loss. I had the privilege of going to middle and high school with Eric and was lucky enough to call him a dear friend. We had such a fun group of friends and Eric was always the life of the party and the root of great laughs and practical jokes. More times than I can count I happened upon a "gift" left in my front yard by Eric and Mellon! He truly never met a stranger and always made everyone around him feel welcome and included! Tommy and Michael, I have no doubt that you all inherited the best of your Dad! He had a contagious personality that drew others in; it is so comforting to know that he will live on through you boys. I can only imagine how proud he was and will continue to be of you two and how much his family's love and support must have meant to him. My heart goes out to all of you; please know how many people he touched with his smile, laughs and amazing personilty. I feel so lucky to have known him. Lara

“ I am so sadden to hear that my friend and former co worker Eric had passed away. He always made me laugh in some way. Eric would do anything for his friends and stick by them in thick and thin. I had the pleasure of traveling to Japan with him many times, on one particular trip during a slight earthquake, I got to see first hand the speed and agility of that big guy as he ran out of the room looking for cover from an earthquake not lasting more than 5 seconds. :-)He will be sadly missed by all. “ To the McCloskey Family: Eric was such a dear friend from 8th grade until we graduated from college. He had such a great sense of humor, and I still find myself quoting funny things that he used to say. Throughout the years, I have told my friends about some of the funny things that he would say and do. Even though some of my friends never met Eric, they have said that they wish they could have. Tommy and Michael - your dad was a good man. He spoke so well of both of you to me. He was trustworthy, loyal, helpful, and kind. We had a great group of friends from our class, and I am confident all would agree that he could always make us laugh, always lighten the mood, and always find creative ways to entertain us. I've told many friends about Eric and the things we did. They always laugh, and more often than not said they wished they had a friend like that. It was an honor to have known Eric and been able to call him a friend.

“ To the McCloskey Family, In this time of grief of sadness, I want you to know how much of an inspiration Eric was to me and others during the past 6 years we worked together at Honda. In spite of his condition he managed to continue to contribute to our business success...by passing on his technical expertise to others who were in need of it...by working with his team members on developing long-term plans...and by wrestling with the daily headaches we faced with all the energy he could muster. Today I sit here in amazement at how he managed to do all that and carry the burden that he carried. Throughout it all there were days when we all could see how difficult it had been for him to just make it in to the office, and other days when working actually meant standing for hours and hours in front of his desk or in the surrounding area, or in meeting rooms, doing his part in the manner that he was able to do it. There was not a day, however, when he couldn't find the time to smile and laugh with us. At Honda we often make reference to something we call the 'Challenging Spirit", a term that describes a certain individual tenacity to overcome problems and find solutions. Eric was the living embodiment of that concept, and we who were there to see it will have that memory forever and won't ever have to look very far to find it again. When I last saw Eric it was early June of this year and our annual time to talk about the past year and the upcoming year. He was apologetic about the time he'd missed and I told him how much we all appreciated his contributions. What I couldn't tell him then I shared above. Eric, you left an indelible impression on all of us. You were a rock and I wonder if I'll ever meet someone with the strength of character that you had. Rest In Peace.
