“ When I first bought the house next to Gene and Jane I brought my son and mother to see it. Even though it was after dark before we left, Gene came right over to meet us. He was a good welcoming neighbor.

After his fall, I would often shovel the snow from their drive. Even though I didn't mind doing it, Gene would always come to the door or window or call over later to thank me. And a couple times he came to the door and said I deserved to relax that night and handed me a bottle of wine!

Most of all, I do remember him always with a smile.
