“ Dear Family:

Mike and I are sending our thoughts and prayers to all of you. We know God has a very special Angel in Heaven and walking with him is many loved ones and friends. As I keep my loved ones near, in my heart, I now you will do that too.

You will always have the memories, the Blessings, love and Hugs that is a Bond that is endless and will be forever with you. For now, you must say, " See you Later, until we gather in God's Glory Land !

Our prayers and thoughts will continue to be with you as you take time to heal and walk through each day with God and your family.

“ *Tonight taught me a lot. A lot of you know and a lot of you don't regardless. This song will teach you those same lessons. Life is precious. I didn't know Joey personally, but many of my friends did and adored him. I felt their despair. So, on the night that I found out the sad news I was going through some rough stuff of my own, and heard "humble and kind" by Tim McGraw. I'm not a big country fan, but appreciating every moment of every day, even the bad ones because they give us another chance to have a go at things. I'll never truly know your sorrow. I felt so selfish for feeling suicidal the week of his passing. He had no choice (or it doesn't look that way or regardless.) It just reminded me that pain is temporary and that my tomorrows are filled with sparks of light and how dare I turn my back on that light. I lit a whiskers on kittens candle in honor of Joey, I hope he liked cats or appreciated the light that was shed his way. There are no words to comfort your family. Just stay humble & kind. Love Always

“ Joey and Liz , I never got the opportunity to meet Joey Jr. But through all of the prayers and post in the last few weeks , I kind of feel like I had known him. And also the fact that we did share the same blood line , I felt a bond every time I would read a new post about Joey. I pray that God will strengthen both of you. And I pray you will find peace in time. I wish I was able to attend but impossible at this time , but I'am with you in thought and prayers . Love and God Bless Aunt Anita 🙏❤️
