“ My memories of my brother that keep coming to mind are of when we were young. One that came to me on Sunday was about Christmas trees. Zeke liked long needle fat trees. Of course I liked short. Every year we argued over trees. So, we had gone in town to Marengo. We lived out by Ross brother's. It was snowing and roads were icy. Mom told us to stop or we would make her wreck. She no more said it until she hit ice and we went around in a circle in the road. Zeke and I were I shock. I don't think we ever argued about a Christmas tree again. We paid attention to what Mom said after that. I was his big sister and we were always close even when we would fight. I have a whole in my heart  that will never mend. I miss him more than words can say. I miss him so much.

“ We have so many memories of Zeke. Shared many fun times through the years. He lived with us off and on for a number of years. He always seemed closer than just a nephew. We shared several vacations together. He was always adventurous. While on vacations he liked driving around just to see where or what the roads led you to. He enjoyed "hot tubbing" with Pete while in our resort in Williamsburgh. We also vacationed with him in Brandon and the last vacation spot landed us in Pigeon Forge, Tn. We shared a resort there with my youngest nephew, Ed, his sister Jacquie, Pete and myself. Purpose of going there was for the guys to ride their motor cycles on "The tail of the dragon". Their ride ended suddenly when Pete's motor cycle went out of control and landed him in hospital. After returning home Zeke worked on Pete's bike to get it running again. He lived a rather short life but a full life. We always said he had nine lives because of all the close calls he had with death. From heart problems, diabetes, brain aneurysm, and motor cycle wrecks he always pulled through. This time there was no coming back. His lungs were too bad and his suffering and fighting to survive were too strong. He is now at peace with God and our other family members who have passed before him. We will miss him dearly. Our lives will not be the same without him. Peace to you Zeke. All our love, Pete and Linda
