“ Joyce, it's Sandy Knost Nicholson. I remember playing badminton in your yard. Ronnie was always ready to play. He would come over and talk cars with my dad. Praying for you.

“ I was always a bit jealous of Ron. His dad took him fishing, and played ball with him, or just went for walks in the fields with him with his BB gun. After his mother died, Ron and his dad looked forward to "pizza night" at Villa Nova, just down the street from them on High Street. I learned this when Steff and I took them a pizza one night, but Uncle Bob said, "Hey, why didn't you get us a Villa Nova pizza? They know our favorites." It has probably not been easy for Joyce, or "Joy-Leah" as her father often called her. She and Steve have had so many extra responsibilities thrust upon them. Thanks to both of them for handling so well a very difficult situation. Ron is finally at peace.
