“ Steve, you have been through so much these last few years. I cannot imagine the struggles you went through on a daily basis after Sue passed. I did see a person who looked lost and had no direction. I did finally get to see that person turn things around even though at one time I had my doubts, You told me on the porch that one cold day after an incident that you could not do it by yourself and the time had come to get some help. From that point on you said you were determined to make your life better. You did exactly that. I seen a complete turn around and that could not have been an easy thing to do. You hardly ever complained from that point on because you said it was up to you to correct things and complaining was not going to help. I would always give him a big hug when I left him and tell him how proud I was of him. I told him to keep his head up and to keep moving forward after every hug. I can only tell you how much Shues and I miss you and I was so fortunate to have a brother like you. Now you and Sue are together again and spending your eternal lives together.
